Are you a faculty member with expertise in microbiology or infectious diseases?

Looking to improve your influence on decision-making at work and pitching your ideas for that next grant proposal?

You can receive executive communications training from Ruth Milligan, Founder and Principal at Articulation Inc., one of the original curators for TEDx events, and current co-curator for TEDx Columbus. Ruth and her team will work with you to advance your communication style to one that enhances your persuasive influence on your target audience!

What does this involve?
• 10 hours of training during March-April 2017
• Participation in presentation event to showcase training accomplishments April 21st, 2017.

What is the cost to participate?
• 30% cost-share ($525) required; Infectious Diseases Discovery Theme will sponsor remaining 70% cost.

Once I’m “trained”, then what?
• You will have the opportunity to participate in the Discovery Talks speakers bureau to address infectious diseases/microbiology issues for the external community.

Apply here:
Application is due February 3, 2017. Click here to fill out an application.

Learn more:
Visit our website go.osu.edu/discoverytalks to see previous talks.
“The coaching helped me prioritize storytelling and stating concepts simply.”
“TED-style coaching required an investment of time, but was worth every minute!”
“This training empowered me to connect with audiences in a new way.”

Contact:
For questions, contact Robyn Kroeger.
Email: kroeger.68@osu.edu
Phone: 614-292-3981