Learn about neuroimmunology,
share your work & network with experts from North, Central and South America

On behalf of the International Society of Neuroimmunology, join us for the Americas School of Neuroimmunology (ASNI), a four-day in-person training conference for neuroimmunology researchers, hosted by The Ohio State University's Chronic Brain Injury Program & supported by Ohio State's Neuroscience Research Institute.

Trainees from across the western hemisphere will enjoy full day activities including meals, featuring talks from international experts in basic and translational neuroimmunology, poster presentation sessions by trainees, and fun evening receptions to connect with each other.

Speakers and attendees represent academic organizations from across the Americas, with visitors staying right on campus to attend activities at the Ohio Union and Ohio Stadium, and enjoy the Columbus nightlife.

ASNI is open to all trainees at the postdoctoral, graduate, and undergraduate levels. Travel support is available.
